

GENERALI AKCJI EUROPEJSKICH

Equity sub-fund

Generali Akcji Europejskich invests mainly in shares of companies listed on stock exchanges of developed European countries. The subfund's portfolio includes primarily shares of enterprises with a stable and well-established market position, operating in various attractive and often very technologically advanced sectors, that cannot be found on other markets. The currency risk of the subfund is hedged.

In addition to shares, the subfund may also invest in subscription warrants, rights to shares, subscription rights, depository receipts. Shares and other equity securities in the subfund's assets should constitute at least 60%. The remaining assets may consist of other categories of investments listed in the fund statute, in particular debt securities and money market instruments. The subfund's investments in shares and other securities are made primarily on the basis of a fundamental analysis. In particular, in the case of equity securities, the basic criterion is the determination of market or technological advantage and the quality of business management.

On January 11, 2020, the investment policy and the name of the fund changed. Old name of the fund – Generali Akcje Biopharma.

The European stock market is often underestimated by investors, who see it through the prism of the region's macroeconomic indicators. However, when you pay attention to the wealth of fundamentally strong companies from sectors that are not present on other markets and the fact that they often benefit from outside the European region, you will see a multitude of investment opportunities that are hard to find on other markets.

Dictionary

Beta to WIG – this ratio shows the relation between changes in the value of a fund unit and changes in the WIG index. Beta of 1 means that changes in the value of a fund unit are the same as changes in the WIG index. Beta below 1 means that a growth (decrease) in the benchmark by 1% is usually connected with a growth (decrease) in the value of the WIG index by less than 1%. Beta over 1 means that a growth (decrease) in the WIG index by 1% is usually connected with a growth (decrease) in the value of a fund unit by more than 1%.

Sharpe's ratio – this ratio shows the profitability of risk borne by the fund compared to safe investments (e.g. treasury bonds). The higher the Sharpe's ratio, the lower the risk at which the return of the fund is generated compared to safe investments.

Standard deviation – this ratio shows how risky the given fund is. The higher the ratio, the more volatile the price of a fund unit. This ratio is used to compare the risk of funds with a similar profile (e.g. equity funds).

On January 11, 2020, the investment policy and the name of the fund changed. Old name of the fund – Generali Akcje Biopharma.
